In Japan, the review of the Dragon Ball Z series has been broadcast continuously throughout the year, with regular broadcasts of sporting events and television specials that took place on average every six weeks. The transmission in the United Kingdom was divided into eight separated and close contiguous blocks, with intervals between each block ranging from four months to over a year. In one case, between episodes 194 and 195, there was a parity between the DVD release and the real series transmitted in terms of "season" and the beginning of the next.
