How to Free Up Space (Memory) on Android

On various forums, and in person, I've argued that DDR3 memory is now reasonably priced. It may not be the cheapest form of memory, but DDR3 is now pretty much mainstream. AMD has recently begun shipping DDR3-capable processors. What's more, we have pretty good evidence that performance of AMD DDR3-capable CPUs scales well with memory speed. That's actually pretty good news, should AMD ever get its act together and actually ship high-end CPUs with integrated DDR3 memory controllers. (As an aside, there's some evidence that DDR2-only socket AM3+ CPUs can work with DDR3, but the memory controller clock is lower, so you do lose something if you can actually make it work.) Of course, Intel CPU performance has always scaled well with memory speeds. This was true in the Netburst days of yore and is certainly true with Core 2 and Core i7 processors. Motherboards supporting Intel CPUs have been available in both DDR2 and DDR3 versions. The exception, of course, is Core i7, since Core i7's memory controller only supports DDR3. But most users have tended to lean towards DDR2 when possible, due to the lower price. But how much lower priced is DDR2 these days? I decided to do a little digging. What I'm presenting here is entirely unscientific, and isn't meant to be comprehensive. For one thing, the data I'll show in a bit only comes from one source, albeit a large one: Newegg.com. Newegg sells a lot of memory, and also carries a lot of different brands. I scanned the Newegg pages on memory, focusing on several memory configurations and prices: 2GB kits, with 2 x 1GB modules in DDR2-800, DDR2-1066, DDR3-1333, and DDR3-1600 speeds. 4GB kits, with 2 x 2GB modules, also at DDR2-800, DDR2-1066, DDR3-1333, and DDR3-1600 speeds. I also looked at Core i7 triple channel kits: 3 x 1 GB 3GB kits and 3 x 2GB 6GB kits, at both DDR3-1333 and DDR3-1600 speeds. I tried to collect data from at least six different manufacturers. These varied a bit, since some kits weren't available from some manufacturers. Note that I picked the lowest cost kit from each manufacturer. These brands included Corsair, SuperTalent, Kingston, A-Data, G-Skill, OCZ, Mushkin, and Patriot. I steered away from extremely overclocked memory, too, as pricing gets ridiculous for the bleeding edge. I also ignored rebate pricing, focusing only on the actual dollars you'd pay up front. Continued... Mind Games Medically Reviewed by Gary D. Vogin, MD All of us have problems recalling a stray fact or name at times, but some of us are so disorganized and forgetful that our brains sometimes seem more like a sieve. No need to panic. Psychologists at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston have developed an innovative program called Memory 101 that's gaining attention from researchers around the nation. Want to turbo-charge your memory -- or least get your engine running smoothly? Here are tips from Memory 101 psychologists Cheryl Weinstein and Winifred Sachs, as well as from clinical memory programs around the country: Make a memory notebook. This is an 8-by-10 notebook with a calendar that will help you plan the minutiae of your life. Fill it with your to-do lists for the day, week, and month. Your notebook can become a portable filing cabinet for phone numbers, addresses, birthdays, medical information, phone messages, inspirational thoughts, bridge-playing strategies -- you name it. Carry it with you, or carry a small notepad to jot down information that you later transfer into your notebook. The act of writing something down reinforces it in your memory. And make sure to look at your notebook several times a day. Talk aloud to yourself. Say: "I'm walking up the stairs to get my glasses. I'm putting my parking ticket in my pocket so I can get it validated. I'm going to the store to buy milk and eggs." If a great idea strikes while you're in the shower, rehearse it out loud to help remember it. Consider carrying a tape recorder to record things you need to remember. Post reminder signs in your house, office, and car: "Remember to buy stamps!" "Remember to take out the garbage on Thursday!" Get in the habit of keeping items where you will need them -- keys by the front door, umbrella in the sleeve of your coat, eyeglasses in the drawer of your nightstand, and so on. Record these locations in your memory notebook. Minimize distractions. Do one thing at a time. Turn off the television or radio when you're talking with someone. At a restaurant, try to face the wall so you can more easily focus on the conversation at your table. Bundle items from your to-do list. Examples: Always clean your glasses at the sink after you brush your teeth; always change the batteries in your home smoke detectors whenever you change the clocks for daylight-saving time. Use mnemonic tricks -- acronyms, rhymes, and so on. When tightening or loosening lids, remember "righty-tighty, lefty-loosey." To recall the Great Lakes, remember "HOMES" (Huron, Ontario, Michigan, Erie, Superior). Slow down. Our ability to store and recall memory slows slightly with age. Ask friends, relatives, and even doctors to speak more slowly. Take care of your body to take care of your mind. Certain medications, poor nutrition, and even small deficiencies in sleep may interfere with memory. Exercise your mind. Reading, playing the piano, watching shows like The Weakest Link or Who Wants to Be a Millionaire, playing cards or chess -- all these activities help keep your brain sharp and active. Understand your own style of learning. Most people are visual learners, remembering best what they see. They benefit the most from memory notebooks and signs. Others are auditory learners, remembering best what they hear. They benefit from talking out loud or using a tape recorder. A few people are kinesthetic learners, remembering best what they experience. They will benefit most from writing things down or acting them out. Knowing your strength will help your memory run at peak efficiency. To enhance your memory, try using all three learning modes. © 2000 WebMD, Inc. All rights reserved. You may have come across an app called Android System WebView on your smartphone. It's a piece of software that enables other apps on your Android device to display web content without having to open a dedicated web browser. However, it's had a slightly more complex history since Android 7.0 Nougat, which incorporated its functionality into Chrome. This article explains what exactly it does and whether you can safely disable it or not. Do I need Android System WebView? The short answer to this question is yes, you do need Android System WebView. There is one exception to this, however. If you're running Android 7.0 Nougat, Android 8.0 Oreo, or Android 9.0 Pie, you can safely disable the app on your phone without suffering adverse consequences. This is because Chrome handled WebView duties for these three OS versions, making Android System WebView largely redundant. Assuming you still have those versions of Android running on your phone, here's what you can do to disable System WebView. First, go to Settings > Apps/Application > More > Show system. Next, scroll down and tap Android System WebView, and then tap Disable. It's worth pointing out that you can't uninstall Android System WebView, since it's a system app. You can, however, uninstall updates for it. This might be something you'd want to do if you need extra storage space, although it's worth remembering that updates usually contain important bug fixes, so it's probably not a great idea from a security standpoint. If you want to know more, you can also check our guide on how to uninstall Apps in Android. Assuming that security isn't a concern for you in this case, you can uninstall System WebView updates by opening Google Play Store on your phone, finding Android System WebView, and then tapping Uninstall. Again, this is advisable only if you're running the aforementioned versions of Android, since Chrome -- rather than Android System WebView -- handles WebView tasks for these systems. Lastly, Google returned WebView duties to Android System WebView for Android 10, Android 11, and now Android 12. So if you are running any of these systems (or Android 6.0 Marshmallow or earlier), we strongly recommend you don't disable the app or delete its updates. What exactly is Android System WebView? To provide a little more detail on what exactly the app does, Android System WebView is a system component for Android that lets your phone display content from the web directly inside an app that isn't a browser. Developers can use Android System WebView to add browser functionality to the apps they develop, by including the WebView code library in their software. By including this, you can effectively insert a browser within their apps, so that you can use these apps to interact with web pages and web-based apps. WebView used to be a core part of the Android operating system, capable of being updated only by updating to a new Android version. However, Google separated WebView from the core OS with Android 5.0 Lollipop, so updates to WebView had to be downloaded through the Google Play app store. It then moved the System WebView component to Chrome with the advent of Android 7.0 Nougat, so you can update the app only by updating Chrome. It then moved it back to the separate Android System WebView app with Android 10, where it still remains. Editors' Recommendations
