PREVIEW

No Tactics Required, Just Brute Strength Attack!!! A nice touch about the TA is that it can transform into a Bow and Arrow Form. Also, the handle of the TA can be twisted 360 degrees so that helps a lot. Worked out pretty well and I was certainly pleased with the new colour. As with most MG kits, I always don't agree 100% with their decal placements, because most of it looks weird to me and goes over uneven surfaces, causing the decals/stickers to peel off easily. This gives it a sense of mobility and speed, much like the Gundam Exia. I did not go overboard with panel lines on this kit, as there were too many and was confusing to decide which to draw. Gerbera Straight + Tiger Pierce

Some katana details. They're so good that I was tempted to use up all the "Lowe" and "MBF-PO2KAI" decals but stopped after realizing that I was slowly turning this kit into a version Ka. Aesthetically, this Gundam is spot on. La antena de hoja grande que dibuja una forma de V y la mentonera que se adjunta debajo de la barbilla se reproducen con un nuevo modelado. [Mochila] Reproduce la mochila con nuevo modelado. También se proporciona un nuevo brazo de suspensión y se pueden conectar brazos tácticos. [cintura] Las piezas de la unidad lumbar para la suspensión de la unidad de potencia y la base de la unidad de potencia se reproducen con un nuevo modelo. Se incluyen dos grandes espadas "Tactical Arms", que es un equipamiento característico de Turn Red. Además de poder colgarse en la espalda, también puedes disfrutar de la acción como un arma de mano. Viene con un soporte de exhibición para armas tácticas. La pose estable es posible. ● [decals de agua incluidos! ¡Viene con una etiqueta adhesiva de nuevo diseño! -Se incluye una figura de Valerio Valeri de la misma escala! Armamento adjunto: armas tácticas / beam rifle / escudo anti-beam / armadura Schneider April 2, 2011 My first impression of the Red Frame was that it has a big ass sword. Or two. Anyway, let's start with Delta Form. Poses extremely well and is pleasing to look at both on the ground and in the air. For me. Left & Right Some left & right goodness on the Red Frame. You might notice some decal placements differing from the "recommended" areas specified by Bandai. To be honest, I'm not a fan with these forms as I think it makes the Red Frame look complicated. It does look pretty menacing what with the tubular designs which looks like some power core thing capable of charging up and emitting highly accelerated laser particles. I found that after spraying a layer of top coat, the TA attaches better to the backpack and is really solid. I deliberately did not panel line the shoulders so as to give it the clean white look, at the same time not interfering with the beautiful decals plastered across. This is my favourite manual art so far. I guess in this term it means "custom". It is really pleasing to the eyes, and looks less bulky compared to others. But I have always liked bows and arrows and since it can transform into a bow, and with two shiny katanas, it was a no brainer. Starting with the katanas, the Gerbera Straight (sounds like some anti-gay organization), and Tiger Pierce (much better). Flightest Form Up next is the Beam Torch. So if you're a Gunpla fan, but still do not have this wonderful kit, snatch it up before it goes out of stock forever! Finally, some boxart poses. If you hear something drop on the floor/desk while posing, don't worry, it's just the V-fin. With this, you can fly! Flight Form : Take To The Skies I modified it a bit and stretched the blade out so it looks more aerodynamically feasible. Arrow Form : The Art Of Archery Pew Pew Pew If you're out of arrows or just sick of shooting a bow, you can GTFO by transforming it yet again to a jetpack-like attachment known as the Flight Form. Aesthetically pleasing. Your imagination (and camera battery) is your limit. However, extra variety can be added in with another sword - the awesomely named Tiger Pierce. Red Frame's Beam Torch Now we go through the many forms of the TA. This is something you can try to counter the weight of the TA. The arms have the ability to stretch all the way back, waist can rotate 360 degrees (although you probably won't be doing that too much), and the ankle joints can be rotated fairly well. I figured it would only be appropriate to stick one right at the tip of the torso as it looked so bare without much details. Albeit the simple design colours that came with the Red Frame, this kit looks great from every angle. The actual transformation is a piece of cake so no problems there; The TA is super solid. In my opinion, the art of this kanji depicted on the Red Frame gives it a really cool look, and really accentuates the use of swords. Huge sword, bow and arrow, two shiny swords with attachable (to wrist and thigh) sheaths, beam torch, and plentiful forms of the TA make posing with this kit infinitely possible. I couldn't wait to cut off the ugly english name parts on the sheath decals when I first saw them. This is extremely annoying. This is because the other hand can hold the sheath, allowing for really dynamic poses. This sword is so big that it can literally be a dagger. 1st one is of this MG kit [link].

second one had a go at the PG! [link] Final Boxart Poses This is the main reason I got the Red Frame. 1/1 Tactical Dagger ILL Thankfully though, it comes with a stand specifically to hold it in action poses and also doubles as a display stand. I found that it's easiest if you first attach the peg on the hand to the TA then try to maneuver the sword around by manipulating the wrist and arm to get the desired look. What I'm trying to say is, it looks to have toned muscles rather than bulk. Gundam Marker To The Rescue They're great and shiny, but the downside is these came in awful yellow colours (see runner) so I painted the yellow parts using the Gold Gundam Marker, GM04. Gerbera Straight Action Shots After Epic Unsheathing Two Of My Favorite Poses As you can see, Red Frame poses really well with just 1 sword. Bandai should have done better on the gold parts. Let's begin with some beautiful box art designs. Not to mention the cool kanji decals you get plastered all over its body. TA can be hard to pose with sometimes, especially holding in the hand. Pick one sword. Talk about convenience transforming a more than potent close quarters weapon into a long range one when you need it. Upper Body + Shoulders Before I continue, a little info on the kanji: "改". When One Is Simply Not Enough Ready For Some Slicin' Now for some Tactical Arms (TA) aka big ass sword. You might say well, the Blue Frame has a big ass sword too. Combining the two points above, it is difficult to make this kit look "ugly" while posing. Thankfully mine did not break, but it does look very fragile, so I would advise extra care to be taken while posing. Plus it has tons of weapons to show. *ps: Click pictures for LARGER image!! Boxart I especially like the art of the instruction manual with the minimalistic design and brushmetal background. Yellow just doesn't cut it. This angle is commonly used by Bandai anyway, and results in the model looking more menacing and untoy-like. It's just a fancy name for a short beam rifle. I gave the arms minimal panel lines to achieve the clean look as opposed to the heavily panel lined image on the back of the manual. CONS V-fin falls off 90% of the time during posing. I promptly ignored this and left it transparent as the sticker looks terrible on the outside. I didn't bother with the Lowe Guele decals for the TA because the black decals just looks distasteful. Plus some decals on the white parts so it does not look too plain. If you're not careful, you might break something due to its weight on the hands. Legs I have to admit, the decals on this kit are awesome. Delta Form And just one lonely pic of the V Form lol. Last Words I really like this kit, so I'm not really sure what to fault with it. The ankle joints felt like they had the ball joint technology from the latest MG Qan[T], so when you spread the legs while posing the feet can still turn and touch the ground. Comes with "custom" stand. And these katanas attach directly onto Red Frame's side hips. Introducing the Gerbera Straight. Manufactured in 2010, this kit features the best articulation I have ever seen in an MG kit. 1/100 MG Gundam Astray Red Frame Lowe Guele's Customize Mobile Suit MBF-PO2KAI I realized that taking portrait shots from this right angle is much much better than taking from the front. I did not get the clear parts version though, as I'm not a fan of transparent kits. The inner frames of the two arms are also almost completely uncovered by armor, followed by the lower part of both legs. The Head The front transparent piece was snapped over the green foil sticker like in the manual, but surprisingly the instructions were to cover the back transparent piece with a green foil sticker on top of it. Subtle details such as the vents on the chest, openings in the torso, and masculine legs gives it a "more than meets the eye" feel. It's the same kanji used in the Play Arts "Kai" line. Without further a due, here it is, in all its glory. I'm not sure if you can buy this stand outside this kit but the red matches Red Frame perfectly. Comes with a whole arsenal of weapons. What is even more compelling is the articulation and poseability. Also, I was aiming for that clean look. This literally means "change", pronounced "kai" as in MBF-PO2KAI. Let's start slowly with 1 sword first. Red Frame's Best Friend Tactical Arms ILL Posing with the TA is no easy feat. My only fault right now was that I did not get Blue Frame together with it. V Form PROS Extremely well articulated. One tip is to remember that the handle can turn 360 degrees so use that to your advantage. Having come from building MG Unicorn ver Ka, this kit felt like an absolute blast to pose. Top it off with wonderful looking decals, and this kit will look great on your shelf (or desk). More Details Nothing too dramatic here. I'll most likely transform it into Sword Form and just leave it on the stand for display or attach it onto the backpack. As usual the sides of the box show you some of the features and poses achievable with this model. Arms and shoulders did not feel lose at all, the TA attaches extremely well to the backpack (after topcoat), so this kit gets a 10/10 in articulation from me. It also has a shitload of panel lines, so for those of you who are Gundam Marker happy, this is the kit to get.
