Rustlers of Panther Gap

The Rustlers of Panther Gap by Gilbert Morris is a story of a boy who is determined to help his Indian friends.

The kids at school treat Hawk and Robin Leatherwood rotten, just because they're "Indians."

When the Buck brothers stand up for their friends, they become a target, too. What's even worse, someone is cutting down Mr. Leatherwood's valuable black walnut

Trees and making off with wood!

The sheriff and his deputies say they're doing all

They can, but they keep coming up empty-handed.

Finally, the Bucks have had enough! Somebody's got to Catch the no-good, rotten, sneaky thief, and they figure

It might as well be them! So Jake hatches a scheme. All

Barney has to do is use Joe's newest invention-the Amazing flying Solarcycle-to play detective from the Air!

About a week after they had a plan and decided on what they were going to do, more trouble comes along.

A couple of no good boys (the Dursley's) start to interrupt their plans by ruining their Solarcycle and starting fights with Barney and Jake. But that won't stop them, they decide to take off anyway.

One evening after Barney had taken off with the Solarcycle and had cruised around above the trees for about an hour or so, Barney spotted something, he couldn't really get a good view so he decided to move in for a closer look. That was all he needed! He spotted the criminals, it was the S, Barney was shocked!

Right when he was about to turn around a bullet ripped through the Solarcycles wing. It was too late; the Solarcycle was spinning dangerously towards the ground.

He hit the ground and was knocked out. The next
