Hit browse e 4 ~ | | Go to C: FLIR\FIF, select SET_RNDIS_PERMAMENT.FIF and press the Run FIF button. I'm not taking credit for any of them. If anyone of this fails and it is necessary to manually restore the original content: (which should not be necessary, but only in case ...) a backup directory of relevant files is created for each "Apply". So we strongly recommend finding a Windows XP or 7, 32-bit PC. This will overwrite the modified files, but it is not important because they can be generated again with the method shown above. The image below is from my laptop, Windows 8.1 and 64 bit, not good! It also works by a virtual machine. If you have a 2.8.0 camera, wait and stay tuned. Congratulations, now you have a resolution 320 x 240! Playback of the resolution Hack to remove the hack resolution and return the camera to its original status, first make sure that the camera is in RNDIS mode and check with IPConfig as shown in the RNDIS switching mode section of this guide. What I'm trying to do here is to make a clearly relaxed guide to run the hack, without having to rounth through the 500 pages of the original forum thread. To do this, first make sure the camera is in RNDIS mode with ipconfig. Make a hard reset on the camera and when you restart you should see the original E4 menus. This means that drivers were installed correctly and the instrument can communicate with the camera. They are strong signed, so if you lose all your backups and on-device files. They are gone.
